THE FACTS

- Omega fatty acids are necessary for maintaining health. These compounds cannot be produced by the body, and must be consumed in the diet.*
- Omega fatty acids support healthy heart, brain nerve and eye function. They help maintain cardiovascular health. They support digestive health and hormone balance, cellular membranes in skin, heart and brain. Omega acids also are believed to reduce periodic sleeplessness and carbohydrate cravings.*
- Omega-3, Omega-6 and Omega-9 oils have been identified as being especially important. An omega supplement must offer all three of these oils to be of greatest value.
- The drawback with typical omega supplements is that they are derived from fish oils. Toxic materials are increasingly being reported in the species that are used provide omega acids. Potentially dangerous levels of heavy metals and other contaminants have been measured.
- In addition, harvesting fish for their omega-rich oils is not environmentally sound because this may not be a sustainable resource. Overfishing is severely depleting the available stock.
- There are other problems regarding this source of omega acids. Processing required in deriving omega from fish oils results in oxidation, which diminishes the amount of omega acids available. This also hastens the spoilage of this material, affecting shelf life.
- In contrast, the source material for Kenzen Omega Green + DHA, cranberry seed oil, flax seed oil and red algae, is easily renewable. Obtaining omega fatty acids from these flora does not produce the oxidation that occurs with piscine oils. This enhances stability.
- As an added measure, Kenzen Omega Green + DHA is emulsified in a proprietary process that encapsulates the active ingredients in fiber. This forms a protective barrier that not only guards against oxidation but serves to control the rate of absorption.*
